2012

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Physicians must provide patient care services around the clock. Yet both patient safety and physician safety concerns have resulted in mandates to limit physician work hours, requiring restructuring of physician work schedules. This course is designed to provide guidance to practicing physicians and surgeons, postgraduate medical education program directors, department chairs, academic medical center administrators, and risk management personnel on how to provide round-the-clock patient coverage while adhering to best scheduling practices. Topics include recent advances in sleep medicine, occupational medicine, and patient safety related to physician work hours, handovers of patient care, and fatigue risk management programs designed to reduce the risk of medical errors, improve patient outcomes, and reduce occupational injuries to physicians.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

At the end of this course, participants will be able to:

- Describe the physiological, environmental, and medical factors that affect a physician's ability to maintain alertness and sustain performance during round-the-clock operations
- Identify work hour policies and patient care handover practices likely to compromise patient safety or increase occupational health and safety risks for physicians
- Translate and apply recent research findings into practice to promote patient safety and physician well-being
- Implement practical work schedules, alertness management programs, and fatigue mitigation policies for physicians, academic medical centers, and other health care institutions that enable round-the-clock coverage, while maximizing performance and minimizing risks to health and safety

COURSE HIGHLIGHTS

- Internationally recognized faculty of the Harvard Work Hours, Health, and Safety Group
- Break-out sessions on applying human performance modeling software, developed for NASA to schedule astronauts, to the work schedule for your program/hospital
- Keynote lecture on the Harvard Medical School Sleep and Health Education Program by Stuart F. Quan, M.D., Professor of Medicine, Department of Medicine, Harvard Medical School and Brigham and Women's Hospital
- Small group, faculty-led discussions on participants' scheduling challenges

ACCREDITATION

The Harvard Medical School is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The Harvard Medical School designates this live activity for a maximum of 28 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits[™]. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Massachusetts and Pennsylvania Course Attendees Only: This activity meets the criteria for 9 hours of Risk Management credit(s) in Massachusetts. Risk management credit(s) were determined based on criteria outlined by the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Medicine. Please check with your individual state licensing board requirements before claiming risk management credit(s). Physicians should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity. This course would meet the requirements of the State of Pennsylvania Board of Medicine for specific CME credits in the area of patient safety and/or risk management.

The Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada recognizes conferences and workshops held outside of Canada that are developed by a university, academy, hospital, specialty society or college as accredited group learning activities.

Endorsed by the Association of Program Directors in Internal Medicine and the National Sleep Foundation

Program changes/substitutions may be made without notice.

This course is designed to meet the new Accreditation Council of Graduate Medical Education (ACGME) Common Program Requirements (effective July 1, 2011) that obligate all ACGME-accredited residency training programs to educate all faculty members and resident physicians concerning the professional responsibilities of physicians to appear for duty appropriately rested and fit to provide the services required by their patients; to educate all faculty members and resident physicians to recognize the signs of fatigue and sleep deprivation; and to educate all faculty members and resident physicians in alertness management and fatigue mitigation processes. Moreover, this course is designed to provide the training and tools necessary for training program faculty to: adopt fatigue mitigation processes to manage the potential negative effects of fatigue on patient care and learning and thereby promote patient safety and resident physician well-being, and implement structured hand-over processes that facilitate both continuity of care and patient safety, as now required by the ACGME.
